CBS has its eye on Darwin again

The hamlet of Darwin drew the attention of CBS News out of New York again on Wednesday of last week.

A three-member crew comprised of an audio man, a sound man and reporter Rob Sweren spent some time in the community and also at the Forest City Museum, where many of the artifacts collected by the late Frances Johnson are stored.

According to Mrs. Vernon Porth, who has been instrumental in promoting Darwin as the site the world's largest twine ball, the crew also took a number of shots of that historic oval.

CBS has promised to let Darwin people know when the footage will be aired on network TV.
